Heavy Demand for Small Notes. WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The Treasury Department finds itself considerably hampered in its efforts to meet the present heavy demand for notes of small denominations by reason of the refusal of the United States Express Company to transport the money at less than regular rates. The company contend that their contract with the department for the transportation of government moneys and securities does not to shipments like to banks and bankers. Department instructions to the assistant treasurer at New York of Aug. 7, last, have been modified accordingly. Future shipments will be made upon receipt of notice of deposits of legal-tender notes and silver certificates with the assistant treasurer at New York, with the understanding that the express charges will here-after be collected by the express company. The notice to bankers that such remittances will be forwarded at government contract rates has been recalled. The demand for small notes is greater than ever before, and indicates unusual business activity. It has been met principally by the exchange of small silver certificates for notes of larger

The Manning Conscience Fund Incident. WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Acting Secretary Batchellor has made a statement concerning the anonymous letter recently published, which charged ex-Secretary Manning with appropriating $5,000 conscience money sent to the Treasury in February, 1887. Secretary Windom knew nothing of the letter. Mr. Batchellor gave it out, together with the statement, that at that time Mr. Manning turned the amount into the Treasury. His account was, in some papers, garbled by omitting the statement that Mr. Manning had turned in the money.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10-Ex-Congressman George W. Steele, of Marion, left Washington this afternoon for Boston. He stated before his departure that he had not been tendered the commissionership of pensions. Further than this he refused to speak on the subject. Secretary Noble, when asked about it, said this afternoon that he was much pleased with Major Steele, and believes he would make a good Commissioner of Pensions. Successful Test of the Vesuvius.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Commander Goodrich shairman of the trial board, telegraphed Secretary Tracy, this morning that the test of the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius had been successful to a degree not anticipated. The guns were fired five times in seventeen minutes, instead of thirty minutes, which had been estimated as the necessary time to fire that number of shots. The speed of the vessel was up to requirements, and even beyond. The plans of the vessel were fur-nished by the Dynamite Gun Company.

There was a lengthy debate on the resolution, but when the vote was taken it carried by a good majority.

Losses by Fire.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.—The great fertilizer factory of C. Ober, Sons & Co., established in 1857, at Locust Point, Baltimore, burned this noon. It consisted of three large buildings which cost $250,000. The fire started in the acid storage-room, from spontaneous combustion, and soon every fire-engine in the city was at the scene. The first build-ing, in which one hundred men were at work, burned to the ground, and the flames, driven by a high wind, spread to another building, completely gutting it. The building will be almost a total loss, while $60,-000 worth of stock was destroyed.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 10.—The general stores, including the stock, at the Badger mine, were destroyed by fire last night. The stock alone was insured for $30,000, but the loss is unknown.

Offered to Pay Them with Lead. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Oct. 10.—The attorneys in the Marsh Doherty assignment case have returned from Kansas City, where they have been taking depositions. Fisher Doherty, the father of Marsh Doherty, testified that they dissolved partnership in July; but this was not generally known until after the failure in August. G. W. Paul and a man named Page, who represented a creditor of Pekin, Ill., went to Kansas City the first of September and induced Mrs. Doherty to give Page a deed to twenty-five acres of mineral land near Joplin, Mo., as a security for the debts owed to Page's firm. They also obtained $1,200 from Mrs. Doherty. The $10,200 sent by Marsh Doherty to Kansas City was received by O. T. Street, a nephew by marriage, and was invested in Colorado mining stock. This money was shipped from here the day before the assignment was made. When Paul and Page returned from Kansas City they also had an order on Mat Doherty for some money.
They arrived in this city at 2 A. M., and went at once and called Mat Doherty up and presented their order, given by Marsh Doherty. Mat refused to pay, and Paul said he had to "come down with the cash." Mat gathered up a gun and told them that they would "come down" if they did not depart at once: They departed, and without the money, too.

Is She Insane?

Special to the Indianapolis Journal COLUMBUS, Oct. 10.—The suit brought by Charles Snyder against his wife, Catherine Snyder, to have her declared of unsound mind has been on trial in the Circuit Court of this county since last Tuesday morning. Mrs. Snyder possesses considerable amount of property in her own right, and recently she gave a donation of $20,000 to Hartsville College. It was because of this action on her part that her soundness of mind has been legally questioned. The court-room has been crowded each day. The examination of the witnesses for the plaintiff was conclud-ed this morning. The testimony all tended to prove the fact that Mrs. Snyder is insane upon the subject of religion, and that when under the excitement of that subject she can be easily influenced to give away almost any thing she possesses. Will Norton, one of the witnesses, testified that about a year ago the trustees of Harlsvile College came to the home of Mrs. Snyder, where he was then staying, and solicited her to give the college a donation of $1,000. She at first refused, but religious services were then held at her home by the trustees, and she soon got to shouting, and seemed to be in every respect insane upon the subject of religion. While in this condition, it was an easy matter to prevail upon her to give her note for $1,000.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. LOGANSPORT, Oct. 10.-While at dinner to-day ex-Attorney-general Daniel P. Baldwin and wife were discussing the Stude baker fire at South Bend. Like most women who take an interest in home affairs Mrs. Baldwin was much concerned about the fire, and fearful lest such a disaster might befall her own home. She told Mr. Baldwin that she would go up-stairs and ascertain if all was secure in the upper chambers. Upon reaching the second floor she was appalled to find the house filled with smoke. The fire had orginated from the gas pipes, but was extinguished after considerable effort. Mr. Baldwin had his right hand quite severely burned.

Wounded in a Sham Battle. Epecial to the Indianapolis Journal. GREENSBURG. Oct. 10 .- The soldiers' reunion was a wonderful success to-day except for one serious accident. The forenoon was spent in regimental reunions. drills,etc., and the reception of strangers. The dinner was all that could be desired, consisting of six beeves, and other things in abundance. By o'clock the largest crowd ever in Greensburg occupied every quarter of town. At 2 o'clock the people went to the farm of Colonel Scoby, southwest of town, to witness the sham battle. About 3 o'clock the opposing forces were in position, and skirmishing began along the picket line and by the artillery. As the gunners of the sixpounder on the "rebel" side were preparing for the fifth firing of the piece a premature discharge occurred, and Samuel Davis Anderson, who was ramming the load, lost his derson, who was ramming the load, lost his right arm, it being torn off entirely below the elbow. His left arm was also badly mangled, and he was otherwise seriously bruised and injured. It is believed to night that he cannot possibly survive the injury. Anderson was a member of General Wilder's famous battery and served there throughout the war, and his associates to-day were all old gunners. No blame seems to attach to any one for the accident.

After the delay caused by this misfortune the battle proceeded, and proved quite attractive and successful, the "rebels" first driving the "Union" forces back, but they rallied and finally captured the "Johnnies." Fire-works and a ball by the Sons of Veterans closed the most successful reunion ever held here, over one thousand veterans having enrolled their names.

Meeting of a Mother and Son Who Had Been Lost to Each Other Thirty Years. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

DANVILLE, Oct. 10 .- A strange and happy reuniting of a mother and son, separated for more than thirty years, took place the other day. James Pate, a prosperous merchant of this city, was born in Kentucky a short time before the outbreak of the rebellion. At the age of two years he was given by his mother to his aunt, another Mrs. Pate, who then resided at Catlin, in this county, near Danville. The war interrupted correspondence between the sisters. The husband of the Illinois Mrs. Pate died, and the widow soon after became a Mrs. Finley and removed to Rossville, Ill. At the close of the war an attempt was made to learn the whereabouts of the boy's mother, but she had removed from Kentacky, and the search was in vain. Some time ago a gentleman from Kentucky was in Danville, and, seeing the name Pate on a and had removed from Kentucky to Har-din county, Illinois. STRANDED IN THE BAY.

The Steamer City of New York Runs Into Mud Bank Through a Pilot's Error. NEW YORK, Oct. 10 .- All attempts to float the City of New York, which grounded in the lower bay last night, proved unsuccessful to-day. Eleven tugs were unable to move her. The report that she was sinking in the quicksands, however, were found to be untrue. A wrecking company cleared the mud and sand from around the ship, so that she can be floated to-night at high tide, The small steamboats Fletcher and John E. Moore landed the bulk of the cabin passengers at the Inmanline dock during the afternoon. There were 500 cabin passengers and 175 second cabin passengers on the steamship. The steerage passengers are numbered up in the hundreds. Among the first-cabin passengers are Wilson Barrett, the great English tragedian, and his company. The City of New York had head-winds nearly the entire passage, with heavy, rolling seas. She was compelled to stop the port engine twice during the gale. Not-withstanding the head-winds and rolling seas and stop she made the passage in six days, ten hours and twenty minutes. There was no accident before the racer got stuck in the mud.

A reporter who went down to where the vessel lies to-day says the big steamer seemed to stand as if she was on a dry-dock. Her bow was more elevated than her stern and her nose was pointed south, southeast. Her twin screws stood almost clear of the water, and she was visibly listed to port. Hundreds of anxious passengers, who were on board, looked half fright-ened to death. Pilot Denis Reardon, was in charge when steamer went aground, was seen. He said he had been a pilot for seven years, and never met with an accident before. He did not like to say much about the mishap until he made his report, but he merely made a slight error. He meant to go right through Gedney's channel, but he got stuck at the mouth. He stood on the bridge with six officers of the vessel, when, looking forward, he saw a pilot boat crossing the steamer's bow, bearing a torch. He ported to avoid colliding with her, and ran aground before he could start. The steerage passengers were so wild and excited that they wanted to lynch the pilot, but that they wanted to lynch the pilot, but they were soon subdued by Captain Lewis and his officers. The steamer Star took the remainder of the second-cabin passengers, about 250 in number, and a good deal of baggage to the city. All the steerage passengers were left aboard. The passengers suffered greatly from cold on their way up to the city. At 11 P. M. the steamer was still aground. The 380 steerage passengers of the stranded steamship City of New York were landed here between 1 and 2 o'clock this morning.

A CLOSELY GUARDED RULER

The Czar Arrives at Kiel and Immediately Leaves for the German Capital.

None but Marines and Soldiers Allowed to Look at His Majesty-Gossip of the Politicians-Miscellaneous News by Cable.

THE CZAR IN GERMANY. Arrival at Kiel, and Departure for Berlin-

Closely Guarded All the Way. BERLIN, Oct. 10.-The Russian imperial yacht Derjava, with the Czar on board, rode into the harbor of Kiel this afternoon, and anchored opposite the castle amid thunderous salutes from the guns of the castle, and those of the war-ships comprising the British and German squadrons riding at anchor in the harbor. Hardly had the Derjava come to anchor when she was boarded by the officers delegated by Emperor William to represent him, Generals Von Werder, Von Kaltenbern-Stockau, Admirals Goltz and Knorr and Court Marshal Von Zekendorff, all of whom warmly greeted the Czar on behalf of Emperor William. Count Schouvaloff, the Russian embassador at Berlin, also came on board, and was cordially welcomed by his imperial master. The whole party remained on board the Derjava until the special train, which was to convey them to Berlin, was in readiness, when the Czar and his suite left the vessel, and, under a heavy escort of marines, they proceeded to the railway station. The Czar was closely garded, and none but the marines and the soldiery was able to obtain so much as a glimpse of him in the course of the trip from the yacht to the train from the yacht to the train.

An American who has lived for some years in Berlin, at the imminent risk of running afoul of the police officials, sums up his impressions of the elaborate military preparations making for the Czar's reception thus: "When expecting a visitor at my country house I usually tie up my watch-dog and get my plate and valuables ready to exhibit. In the case of the Czar the Germans appear to be only reversing

Political Gossip About the Visit. LONDON, Oct. 10.—The newspapers, both here and on the continent, are indulging in all sorts of speculations upon the significance of Prince Ferdinand's visit to Vienna and his entertainment by Emperor Francis Joseph at the very time that the Czar is enjoying the hospitality of the Emperor of Germany. Upon the coincidence of the two visits is built the most fantastic structure of variegated guesswork that the vigorous imagination of the political editor is capa-ble of. None profess to have the slightest foundation of fact for their guesses, yet all are unanimous in the belief that everything s ripe for united action on the part of the three powers most concerned in Bulgarian politics—Germany, Russia and Austria—and that steps will be taken at once to terminate the anomalous position which Bulgaria and her ruler, Prince Ferdinand, have occupied ever since the latter's accession. But right here all unanimity ends. Whether Bulgarian independence is to be decreed, and Ferdinand confirmed as ruler, or the ties which now nominally bind Bulgaria to the Porte are to forged into stouter fetters, and her chosen prince deposed, these are questions upon which there are as many opinions there are editorial utterances. is quite likely that the Berlin Tageblatt hits upon the true solution of the whole problem when it declares that Prince Ferdinand's visit to Vienna at this particular juncture is purely accidental, and that all speculation upon its significance is a sheer waste of time.

The visit of the Czar to the German capital and its political import are subjects which the German papers appear to handle very tenderly. arbitration. Must Be Held Sacred from Ridicule. LONDON, Oct. 10. -Several London theatrical critics would be delighted to give their true opinion of the proceedings of Mr. Irving against his imitator, Leslie. Leslie is personally more popular than Irving, but the latter is the protege of the Queen and the Prince of Wales, and must, therefore, be held sacred from ridicule. Not Just What Spain Wanted.

A National Air. Boston Transcript. A correspondent wants to know how the tune of "God Save the King" came to be adopted as the national air of Germany and Switzerland, as well as of England. Probably in the same way as it was taken for a patriotic melody in this country-by "conveyance." Its popularity in Germany may have been hastened by the use made of it by two German composers—Beethoven, who wrote a set of variations on it for the pianoforte, and introduced the theme in his Buttle Symphony; and Von Weber, who worked it into his cantata, "Battle and Victory." employed it as a finale to his "Jubel" overture, and twice harmonized it for four voices. Nearly a hundred years ago the Danes appropriated it as a national bymn to words which afterwards became "Heil dei im Siegerkranz," and in 1703 it appeared in print as a Berlin folksong. Our English cousins who have experienced so much unhappiness because of our use of the tune, before making the matter a cause of war with us, should demand indemnification from Germany, into which country it was imported without paying duty to the home government or tribute to the land of production, about half a century in advance of its use in the United States.
